

What should we change?

The temperatures of rooms, some being under the average 16 degrees and so this then can damage our learning. I have had many requests to bring this up as it is a university wide problem.

How should we change it?

Thermometers in every room to keep check of the temperatures and if not then have the device that can change this. It may even be that some buildings get double glazing put in to keep in the heat within the room itself.

Who should lead the change?

President of Education & President of Wellbeing and Diversity
